Speech from Col. Corcoran

On the occasion of a musical reception of Col. Corcoran and his fellow officers at Washington, August 18th, on their return from Richmond, he made the following manly and patriotic speech in reply to Congressman Ely, who had welcomed his former companion in captivity:

Mr. Ely, Officers and Men composing the Sixty-ninth Regiment of New York State Militia, and Fellow Citizens: I return to you my most grateful and heartfelt thanks for the cordial greeting which you have given to me and my fellow prisoners on our return among you. I return you thanks most sincerely. [illegible] what it is in this mind and heart for me and for them [illegible] marks were necessary of your splendid devotion to the glorious institutions under which we have the blessing to live. It would be impossible for me to say enough [illegible] enthusiasm [illegible] among the people at this present moment. I had the evidence. I saw it yesterday and to-day. I have seen the troops rushing from other States again to the rescue and at this time [illegible] never to advance again far into Dixie. [illegible] these traitors who have brought down our flag in several States of this Union. [Loud applause.] I have never been among those who have talked lightly of this matter from the beginning. Mr. Ely knows that when I was in prison with him I remarked that I wished a million men would be placed in the field at once, believing that it was the easiest and cheapest way of crushing this rebellion at once. [Applause.] The country has now at last been aroused to the importance of this struggle. They are willing to give a million—yes, two millions of men, and every man and every dollar in possession of every man to uphold and protect this country and preserve our glorious institutions as they were handed down to us by our forefathers. [Vociferous cheering.] You here in this part of the country have not seen any of the horrors of war. You know nothing about it. You are not ruled by military despotism; but we who have traveled and seen, and conversed with the people who are suffering at the hands of the worst despotism that is known upon the earth—we owe it to this people to go to their rescue. I have come from North Carolina, and I can say of her she has her thirty thousand troops in the field. One half of those men, if they were free to speak, would speak in favor of returning to the Union. [Loud applause.] But I will also say that their State pride, their blind love, perhaps, for State institutions will cause them to fight well in the ranks until we can give them assurance that we can send into the interior of North Carolina, and into the interior of every State, a sufficient number of troops for the Union people to rally around.

I have much to say to the old Sixty-ninth. [Cries of "Go it," and cheers for the Sixty-ninth.] I am rejoiced to see them here again. I was rejoiced when the tidings reached me in prison that they were again in the field. I am rejoiced to-night to see that good old green flag that has been saved from the battle of Manassas [tremendous cheering] mingled again with the Stars and Stripes, and its members willing, I know, to lay down their lives for the upholding of these same Stars and Stripes. [Loud applause.] Your term of service, I know, is nearly expired. You will be returning again to New York, but not, I hope, to remain there. [Cries of "No, no, never," and cheers.] Some must from necessity remain; but to my countrymen in that regiment, to those who are of the same all over the world, and particularly those who are here listening to me to-night, I would say we owe a solemn duty that we must obey. Personal considerations must be thrown one side; we must render our services to the United States, and every man remain there until the last blow is struck. [Cries of "true," "good," and applause.] I ask no man to go where I am not willing to go—[shouts of "That's so," and applause]—and I never ask a man to go one inch nearer the enemy than I move myself. [Cries of "That's so." "That's why you were taken prisoner."]—and I trust that when I return to New York I will not remain there many days until I am once again ready with my own Sixty-ninth to rally around me and again take the field with men of my countrymen to endeavor to preserve this country for our people. [Cries of "We are with you."] Gentlemen, I do not wish to detain you longer, but I will say this, that this is a splendid school for military training. The Archbishop told them so in Ireland. It was a very significant hint—[Applause and laughter.] I think there will be no intervention, and if there is we will try our hand at it. [Cries of "Bravo," "That we will," and vociferous cheering.] I will from this spot say, without fear of contradiction, that we can prevent them from giving any trouble on this side the Atlantic. [A voice—"And we'll bother them mightily on the other side too."] A work is here to be done. We must go at it with a will, and when that is over we will make an opportunity for ourselves perhaps elsewhere. [Applause.]

From China.—Ship [illegible] from Hongkong brings dates to the 22d of July.

Ship Phantom, which sailed from San Francisco May 6th for Hongkong, was totally lost on July 13th on Pratas shoal. Her cargo was 2400 barrels of flour, 80 flasks of quicksilver, and [illegible] in treasure. Her crew and passengers got off in the boats, intending to proceed to Hongkong. Owing to a heavy sea they became separated, and the day after the wreck the boat in charge of Hennessy, second officer, and the boat in charge of Walker, boatswain, were attacked by pirates of Swatow, who took everything, even stripping the men. These two boats again made the land forty miles further on and went ashore, after being four days without anything to eat. The Chinese took [illegible] and they were enabled to purchase provisions. They reached Hongkong the following Saturday, six days after the wreck. A British war steamer was immediately dispatched after the missing boats. The second mate was an invalid and had three men with him who are not sailors. As the sea was very rough, it is feared his boat was lost. The boat in charge of Captain Sargent was a pilot boat and a good sea boat. She had twelve boxes of treasure on board and was probably blown on the coast. Archer, chief mate, had eight men with him in his boat. They should have all arrived before the [illegible] left.

The Hongkong papers publish every report unfavorable to the Federal cause, and evince unqualified sympathy with rebellion.

SATURDAY MORNING, SEPT. 20, 1862

Personal Attacks.

The last number of the Oregon Statesman contained no less than ten different articles upon one page devoted to personal abuse of Rev T H Pearne, we presume because he was a candidate for United States Senator and got defeated. Had Mr Pearne been elected we are not prepared to say how many more such articles would have appeared, but we have good reason to believe that the number would not have been less. We cannot see the impropriety of any citizen of Oregon who possesses the Constitutional requirements necessary for the position of U S Senator to become a candidate for that honorable station, nor do we comprehend the necessity of a dictation from the editor of the Statesman or any other well-bred politician, to the members of the Legislative Assembly, as to who they shall choose as United States Senator.

We maintain that we live in a free Government, that every citizen thereof has the indisputable privilege of exercising any and all the rights, claims and benefits that are granted to him under the Constitution of that Government, and that if he wants to run for United States Senator, or any other honorable or lucrative office he has a perfect right to do so, and that it is not the province of Mr. Bush "or any other man" to say that he shall not.

And further, we cannot appreciate the compliment paid by the editor of the Statesman to the members of the Legislature who voted for Mr Pearne. We believe that each member voted as he wished to see the election go, and we have abundant evidence that those who voted for Mr P. had sufficient intelligence to know what they were doing.

It comes with bad grace from one who is universally known as a shrewd politician, to use no stronger term, to accuse an opponent with using undue means to secure his election. We opine that if all the facts connected with the recent contest for United States Senator could be faithfully told, the public would discover "hypocrisy and corrupt tricksterING" in other directions than those charged by the Statesman. To be plain, we regard the attack of the Statesman as too much like the cry of "stop thief." However, if the editor of that journal believes that he can gain a point by keeping up this peculiar personal abuse of all who may come in his way, or refuse to bow to his dictatorial mandates, he has our consent, and no doubt that of Mr Pearne also, to pitch in, if he thinks there is no hereafter.

Oregon State Agricultural Society.

The regular biennial session of the Oregon State Agricultural Society met in Salem on Wednesday last, Sept 17th, and on motion Mr. J. Quinn Thornton was called to the chair. On motion the Society proceeded to the selection of officers for the next ensuing term, which resulted as follows

President, J Quinn Thornton, of Benton county; Vice Presidents, A G Hovey, of Benton county, John Laughlin, of Yamhill county, Wm. J Herren, of Marion county, M Hanley, of Jackson county, John Emmett, of Douglas county, M Wilkins, of Lane county, Jesse Applegate, of Umpqua county, T L. The office of Recording Secretary was declared vacant, and Samuel E May elected to fill vacancy. On motion,

Resolved, That when this meeting adjourn it adjourn to meet in the Legislative Hall on Thursday, the 18th inst. at half past seven P. M. On motion,

Resolved, That the question of permanently locating the State Fair Grounds at some permanent point in the State, be voted on and decided at the adjourned meeting to-morrow evening.

Preparations are being made with proper energy and considerable expense for the coming Fair. The grounds are being inclosed, houses and sheds erected, and general improvements made to accommodate all who may attend. It is expected that nearly ten thousand people will be in attendance, and no pains will be spared to render the occasion agreeable, pleasant and creditable to the State. We hope it may be so.

Thanks to Wells, Fargo & Co for files of papers, and Purser Benton for memoranda and passenger list.

WARREN'S DISCOVERY.—Reports from this new discovery still continue favorable. Some five or six hundred men are at work in the district, and the more lucky ones are taking the gold out at the rate of from $600 to $1000 per day.

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS

Senate

September 18, 1862

Senate met at the usual hour, President Bowlby in the chair. Absent Mr Kelly.

Mr. Greenwood, chairman of committee on military affairs, reported back H J R No 5, asking Congress for arms and ammunitions of war for the defense of the State and for an iron clad gunboat at the mouth of the Columbia river, without amendment, and recommended its passage. Passed.

Mr Hovey, chairman of committee on federal relations, reported a bill for the payment by the State of the direct federal tax. Passed.

Several bills were taken up and referred to appropriate committees.

AFTERNOON SESSION. Mr Mitchell, chairman of judiciary committee, reported back Senate Bill No [illegible] relative to jurisdiction of Justices of Peace. Report adopted and bill referred to committee of the whole.

Also Senate Bill No [illegible] an act to prescribe certain conditions upon which money can be drawn from the State Treasury, with amendments, requiring every person who desires to draw money from the State Treasury to first take and subscribe to an oath or affirmation that he or she will support the Constitution of the United States, the Constitution and laws of this State, and will not favor or countenance rebellion. Amendments of committee adopted. Rules suspended and bill read a third time.

Mr Drew offered to amend by striking out "oath or affirmation," and insert "subscribe a certificate," which certificate shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of State. He argued that the requirement of an oath would create unnecessary expense, and that a certificate would answer the purpose just as well.

Mr Mitchell replied that the effect of the amendment would be to emasculate the bill and render it useless, and the real object thereof would be lost. He believed that parties who seek to get money from the Treasury should be required to swear, and not only to swear, but in doubtful or notorious cases of sympathizing treasonists, that further evidence should be required. Mr McBride agreed with Mr Mitchell.

Upon the motion to amend the yeas and nays were demanded, and the following was the result

Ayes—Messrs Chrisman, Drew, Fitzhugh, Munroe, 4. Nays—Messrs Ballard, Curl, Greenwood, Grim, Holton, Hovey, McBride, Mitchell, Taylor, Wagner and Mr President, 11.

Mr Drew moved to amend by striking out that portion giving the Secretary of State power to require further evidence of loyalty than the oath. He thought it constituted the Secretary of State a judicial tribunal to try traitors and that gave him too much authority, as it was not a proper tribunal.

Mr Mitchell said that he believed Mr Drew intended to kill the bill by finding so many faults with it. He thought every person who was a true loyal man could easily produce additional evidence of his loyalty.

Mr. McBride showed that the provisions of the bill were precisely the same as required by officers of the land office.

Mr Drew thought members had no right to question his motives.

Upon the motion to strike out the yeas and nays were called, as follows

Ayes—Messrs Drew, Fitzhugh, Hovey, Munroe, 4. Nays—Messrs. Ballard, Chrisman, Curl, Greenwood, Grim, Holton, McBride, Mitchell, Taylor, Wagner and Mr President, 11. Motion lost.

The question then being upon the final passage of the bill, the yeas and nays were called, as follows

Ayes—Messrs Ballard, Chrisman, Curl, Drew, Greenwood, Grim, Holton, Hovey, McBride, Mitchell, Taylor, Wagner and Mr President, 13. Nays—Messrs Fitzhugh and Munroe, 2. Bill passed.

On motion Senate adjourned.

House

September 18, 1862

House met according to adjournment.

Mr. Ballard presented petition from citizens of Clackamas asking for the passage of a usury law. Referred to committee.

Mr. McCoy, chairman of the committee on counties, reported bill to organize Baker county.

The report of the committee with their amendments was adopted.

The bill was ordered to come up on its third reading this afternoon.

The same committee reported bill to organize Umatilla county.

Mr Humason moved that the bill be engrossed and read a third time to-morrow.—And it was so ordered.

Mr Moores introduced a resolution to print fifty more copies of the bills before the House. Adopted.

Mr Dufur moved the reconsideration of the vote on Senate Bill No [illegible] appropriating $70 for the relief of Mr Burmister.

Mr Stevenson was in favor of the reconsideration so as to have Mr Burmister sworn to support the Constitution of the United States.

Mr Moores moved to lay the motion on the table, which did not prevail.

Upon the question of reconsideration a debate arose in which a number participated.

Mr Moores thought the debt was just and ought to be paid. He had no doubt but what the claimant would take the oath. Probably not a citizen of the State who would not.—The question of loyalty was not a matter for the Legislature. The claimant did the work and ought to be paid. He was in the service of the Sergeant at arms, in pursuit of runaway Senators two years ago.

Mr Stevenson thought that the vote should be reconsidered so as to give members an opportunity to investigate the matter. And he desired to offer an amendment to the bill providing that the said Burmister should take the oath of allegiance. If he refuses we have no business to pay him, or to give money to any enemy of the country. Such would be aiding and abetting the enemies of the country, and he is opposed to the Legislature doing any such thing.

Mr Simpson wanted the vote reconsidered—wanted the claimant put to his oath. He had no friends he would wish to shield from such a test. He was opposed to paying money to any open and avowed enemy of the country. He considered this the true principle and test, and that an avowed traitor had no right to call on the Legislature for any relief. And any person refusing to take the oath of allegiance has no rights which loyal people are bound to respect. He hopes gentlemen will not trifle with these important matters. They should realize the enormity of the crime of treason, and the deadly strife waged by traitors against our common country. It should be treated with firmness and rigor, and make traitors feel that they are not welcome to come asking for money and at the same time defying the laws by which all rights are secured. It being preposterous for men to be claiming rights under laws which they bid defiance to, and are endeavoring to break down, and claiming rights of a Government, which Government they are seeking every means to destroy.

Mr Fay argued that this Legislature had no right to try a man's loyalty. The Legislature has the power to make laws but not to execute them. Our form of Government provided different departments, and the distinction should be observed. If not a man might be convicted under a law just enacted and then in a few moments executed. We have courts. Thank God the writ of habeas corpus is not suspended here yet. Let the man, if he is a traitor, let him be convicted, and if found guilty let him be executed, let him be hung. We should maintain the dignity of this body. If the independence of the South was recognized then it would not be legal in time of war to pay bills to the subjects or citizens of that nation. But that independence is not recognized, therefore the belligerent persons are rebels. But it must be ascertained that a person is in rebellion, is a rebel, then let him be dealt with accordingly. Let him be hung! We should not misjudge a man and heap disgrace and opprobrium upon an innocent man.

The vote to reconsider failed and the bill was referred to a select committee.

Mr Moores introduced a resolution to allow the State Agricultural Society the benefit of the Legislative Hall this evening at seven o'clock.

Notice given from the Senate of the concurrence of that body in joint resolution No 8, memorial to Congress asking an appropriation to build an iron clad steamer for the defence of the Columbia river.

Mr Dufur offered a resolution that no money be paid by order of this House without first administering the oath of allegiance to the person making the claim. Laid on the table.

H B No 11, to purchase one hundred copies of the reports of the Supreme Court, by an appropriation of $1,000. Referred to the committee of the whole House.

H B No 12, for the relief of A B Westerfield, Jas. McAuliff and Chas Mansfield, passed to third reading.

H B No 14, to amend the corporation of the town of Astoria. Referred to committee on corporations.

H B No 22, to change the name of Clatsop county to Astor. Engrossed and passed to third reading to-morrow.

AFTERNOON SESSION. H B No 1, a bill to amend the corporation of Jackson county, was rejected.

H B No 7, a bill to amend the charter of Oregon City, passed.

Mr Humes moved that the vote on H B No 1 be reconsidered—prevailed.

H B No 3 was now taken up.

Mr Fay moved to strike out Baker and insert Chemino.

Mr Fay wanted to know if this proposed county filled the constitutional provisions.—Has it the requisite extent of territory, and the number of inhabitants required by law?

Mr Humason explained that there was no doubt about all these requirements. Had the requisite extent of territory, being about as large as all the Willamette Valley. He produced evidence showing the lines on the maps and read affidavits in regard to the number of inhabitants. Said the people needed the organization of this county—they deserved it—they were an orderly community, and worthy of this attention.

The vote being put the bill passed 31 to 1.

Mr Gillette introduced a bill relating to the establishing of an Agricultural College, which was read a first time.

Mr Fay introduced a bill to regulate the filling of vacancies in the offices of Governor, Secretary of State, Printer, &c.

Mr Moores moved to reject the bill, saying that he thought it inconsistent with the constitution, and in its provisions did not meet the objects stated.

Mr Fay sustained his bill, argued its constitutionality. Did not claim that his bill was perfect—hoped to see it amended by this House.

Mr Mallory opposed the bill, and sustained the move to reject. Thought the objections well taken.

Mr Dufur said the bill had merit and ought not to be rejected. Said we had the power thirty nine to one, but hoped the bill would not be rejected. He wanted to find out more about it.

Mr. Fay asked no mercy from the House, he considered a bill of the nature of the one presented was needed in the State. They might reject it; but hoped they would get up one more suitable. Defied any member to show wherein it contravened the constitution.

The yeas and nays being taken the motion to reject was not sustained, and the bill was referred to the committee on the Judiciary.

Adjourned to the usual hour.

The following items are from the Mountaineer of the 19th.

GOLD.—A report is current that a large amount of gold dust has been seen in the hands of Warm Spring Indians. If this be so, it proves one of two things—either that mines exist in the neighborhood, or that a miner has been murdered and then robbed of his treasure. Parties are now out for the purpose of investigating the matter, and we shall soon know which of the suppositions is the correct one.

SALMON RIVER MINES.—Mr Woodard is down from Florence City. He reports business dull. The miners are unable to do much on account of the scarcity of water.

ACCUMULATION OF FREIGHT.—There is now at Wallula, as we are credibly informed, not less than 800 tons of merchandise. All the stores and warehouses are filled to overflowing. There is an immense number of teams on the road between Wallula and Lewiston, but yet not sufficient to carry off the freight as rapidly as it is landed from the boats.

FIRE AT ST HELENS.—From a letter dated September 19, we take the following

Last night at 10 o'clock some unknown scoundrel set fire to my storehouse, on the outside at the bottom, and when first discovered it was too far advanced to save the building. Such was the rapidity with which it spread, though the fire came from the farther end from the door, that in eight minutes we could not enter it. The wind blowing fresh upstream assisted the flames in spreading through the building in so short a time. I lost my entire stock of goods with the exception of a small amount which were handy to the door. The wharf is considerably damaged. The building is an entire loss, with about 150 cords of wood and 2 cords of oak staves. The total loss is near $4,000. We have no clue to the incendiary except his tracks at and near where he set the fire. Much credit is due to the few friends who exerted themselves in assisting me to quench the flames and save the goods. The mail matter was saved and some of the post office papers.

GENERAL WRIGHT AND HIS LATE ORDERS—A MILITARY PRISON TO BE ERECTED.—San Francisco, Sept 12th. General Wright is still indisposed at the Warm Springs, but at his earliest opportunity will appoint a military Commission to consist of three officers, who will take cognizance of all cases of arrests for disloyalty under the recent orders from Washington, which are intended particularly to meet the case of rebels who have lately emigrated from the Atlantic States.—The decision of the Commission will be without appeal to the Courts. Directions have been given for the immediate construction of a prison on Alcatraz Island for political offenders. Capt Winder of that post has been relieved, and is succeeded by Capt Black.

The Markets.

Since our last business of all kinds has considerably improved. Many of our dry goods merchants have already commenced opening their Fall and Winter stocks, and have evidently been doing a good week's business. In our domestic produce prices current we note an advance in butter of from 2c to [illegible] per pound; lard, [illegible]; bacon 2c, and still advancing; eggs, [illegible] per dozen. On the whole there has been some activity in all kinds of domestic produce, which was no doubt caused by the arrival and departure of two ocean steamers within the past week.

The Daily Oregonian.

CITY.

[illegible] OREGONIAN has a larger [illegible]TION LIST than any other Daily published in this City.

THE DAILY OREGONIAN may be had at the Franklin [illegible], and at Charles Barrett's, Front street.

PETTY LARCENY.—Yesterday forenoon, as [illegible] Pritchard was coming down Front street, he noticed a young man appa[illegible] eighteen years of age "nip" a [illegible] in front of Wiberg & Strowbridge's shoe store. When the thief found [illegible] been seen in the act, he struck out, [illegible] the shoes, into a full run, when [illegible] chase. It was "nip and tuck" [illegible]; but being closely pressed, [illegible] dropped the stolen property, [illegible] his pursuer was engaged in picking [illegible] round the next corner and made [illegible]. He probably was about to [illegible], and wanted the shoes for his lady [illegible] too short of funds to buy the [illegible] ought make a raise honestly.

[illegible] steamer Pacific sailed for [illegible] yesterday evening with $90,000 [illegible] some six hundred boxes of [illegible]

[illegible] COURT.—John Thomas was [illegible] five dollars and costs for being [illegible] disorderly.

[illegible]—At the Willamette Theatre [illegible] a very large audience of ladies and [illegible] assembled to witness the won[illegible] interesting performances of Martin, [illegible]. His tricks were truly astonish[illegible] performed with such skill that none [illegible] to detect them. He performs again [illegible]

[illegible] There must have been a hundred [illegible] the concert in the Turn Verein [illegible] night. The music by the Aurora [illegible] was excellent. The most pleasing [illegible] performance was the violin solo [illegible] Bonnet, a boy eight years old, [illegible] of the most difficult pieces of Bel[illegible] Opera of Norma. The execution [illegible] lad would have done credit to [illegible]

[illegible] Opera House, notwithstanding [illegible] other places of amusement, had a [illegible] audience last night. The "Virginny [illegible]" still takes well. They play it again [illegible]

[illegible] EMIGRANTS.—The steamer Carrie [illegible] at down quite a number of emi[illegible] night, among whom was our fel[illegible] Mr. A. Kaufman, who came [illegible] plains with a number of friends.

"Are you tired, Isaac?"

The farmer was wiping his face and hands on the brown crash towel which hung near the window He was a tall, stalwart, muscular man, sun browned and weather beaten, yet he had keen, kindly eyes, and the hard features had an honest, intelligent expression Mrs Parsons was cutting a loaf of rye bread at the kitchen table Her husband turned and looked at her a moment as though he had doubted this whether he had heard aright His wife's face bent over the bread, and he could not see it, but the words came a second time

"Are you tired, Isaac?"

It was a long time since Mr Parsons had heard that soft, quiet voice It stole over his heart like a wind from the land of his youth

"Well, yes, I do feel kind o' tuckered out It's hard work to get in all that corn with only one hand besides Roger"

"I reckoned so, and I thought I'd broil the chicken for tea, and bake the sweet potatoes, as you relished them best so"

Mr Parsons did not say one word, he sat down and took the weekly paper out of his pocket, but his thoughts were too busy to let him read one word He knew very well his wife's aversion to broiled chickens, and as the kitchen was her undisputed territory, he was obliged to submit and have his chickens stewed, and his potatoes served up in sauce, notwithstanding she was perfectly aware that he preferred the former broiled and the latter baked; and this unusual deference to his taste fairly struck the farmer dumb with astonishment, and he sat still and watched his wife, as she hurried from the pantry to the table, in her preparations for tea, and then there came across him the memory of some of the harsh, angry words he had spoken during their morning quarrel, and the words smote the man's heart. And while Mrs Parsons was taking up the daintily broiled chicken, two boys and a girl burst into the kitchen

"Hush, hush, children," wound in among the obstreperous mirth like a silver chime the soft voice of the mother "Father is busy reading the paper, and you'll disturb him."

The children were silenced at once, not in fear of the reproof, but in wonder at it, for the wife as seldom consulted his wishes in the small, everyday matters which makes the happiness or irritation of our lives, as he did her's

In a few moments the hungry family gathered around the table There was little spoken at the meal, but a softer, kindlier atmosphere seemed to pervade the room The children felt, though they did not speak of it.

"Are you going anywhere this evening, Isaac?"

"Well, yes, I thought I'd step round to the town meeting Want anything at the store?" continued Mr Parsons, as he tried to button his collar before the small looking glass, whose mahogany frame was mounted with boughs of evergreen, around which scarlet berries hung their charms of rubies

But the man's large fingers were clumsy, and after several ineffectual attempts to accomplish his purpose, Mr Parsons dropped his hand with an angry grunt, that "the thing would not work"

"Let me try, father" Mrs. Parsons stepped quickly to her husband's side, and in a moment her hand managed the refractory button

Then she smoothed down a lock or two of black hair which had strayed over the sun-burnt forehead, and the touch of those soft fingers felt very pleasant about the farmer's brow, and woke up in his heart old sweet memories of the time when he used to feel them fluttering like a dream through his hair

He looked on his wife with a softness in his keen eye which he little suspected — And the softness and the smiles stirred a fountain warm and tender in Mr Parsons' heart, which had not for years yielded one drop from its sweet waters She reached up her lips impulsively, and kissed his cheek Any one who had witnessed that little scene would scarcely have suspected that the married life of Isaac Parsons and wife counted three quarters of a score of years.

The woman's comely face was as full of sly blushes as a girl's of sixteen, and Isaac Parsons seized his hat and rushed out of the house without speaking a word, but with a mixture of amazement and something deeper on his face not easily described.

But at last he cleared his throat and muttered to himself, "Melissy shan't repent that act—I say she shan't," and when Isaac Parsons said a thing, everybody knew that he meant it

* * * * * *

The sunset of another autumn day was rolling its vestures of purple and gold about the mountains, when the wagon of Isaac Parsons rolled into the farm yard He had been absent all day to the city, and supper had been waiting him nearly an hour, and the children had grown hungry and impatient.

"O, father, what have you got there?" they all clamored, as he came into the house tugging along an immense bundle tied with cords

"Something for mother," was the rather unsatisfactory answer

At this moment Mrs Parsons entered the kitchen Her husband snapped the cords, and a breadth of ingrain carpeting rolled upon the floor, through whose dark green ground work trailed a russet vine and golden leaves—a most beautiful and graceful pattern

Isaac Parsons turned to his amazed wife, "There, Melissy, there's the parlor carpet you asked me for yesterday morning I reckon there ain't many that will beat in West Farms"

A quick change came over Mrs Parsons' face, half of joy, half of something deeper "Oh, Isaac" she put her arms around the strong man's neck, and burst into tears

The trio of children stood still, and looked on in stolid amazement The sight of their faces was the first thing that recalled Isaac Parsons to himself

"Come, come, mother," he said, his voice was not just steady, "don't give way like this I'm as hungry as a panther now, and want my supper before I do anything but put up the horse," and he strode off to that impatient quadruped in the back yard

So the new carpet proved an olive branch of peace to the household of Isaac Parsons While others admired its pattern or praised its quality, it spoke to Mrs Parsons' heart a story of all that which love and patience can accomplish After many struggles, and much prayer, the triumph over perils, and passions, and evil habits was at last achieved and this was not accomplished in a day or a month, or a year that the small leaven that leaveneth the whole lump, working silently and surely completed at last its pure and perfect work, and at the farm house of Isaac Parsons reigned the spirit of forbearance and self relinquishment, of gentleness and love, which was given unto those "who fear God and keep his holy commandments"
